Dreſden, Nov. 4, N. S. We have different Advices as to the Czarina's Ratification of the Preliminaries of Peace between Her and the Porte. In the mean time, Count Munich waits his Orders at Choczim, having laid four Bridges on the Dnieſter, which makes ſome of the Poles fearful of his Motions and Deſigns of taking up his Winter Quarters in their Country. Deputies from the Palatinate of Belsk are arrived here, to petition the King, that they and their Country-men may have the Loſſes they have already ſuffered by the Coſſacks made good to them; and that in caſe the Ruſſian Troops ſhould repaſs through Part of Poland, they may not winter there, but make as ſhort a Stay as poſſible. Being admitted to an Audience of the King, he commanded the Vice-Chancellor of the Crown to aſſure them in his Preſence, that having nothing more at Heart than the Preſervation and Welfare of his faithful Subjects, he would, purſuant to their Requeſt, cauſe the Inſtances to be repeated which had been already made to the Court of Ruſſia on this Subject.
